

Companies partner for clean coal electricity coalition

April 22 -- More than 40 companies from the electricity generation, transportation, coal production, energy technology, and equipment manufacturing industries have partnered to create the American Coalition for Clean Coal Electricity.

The coalition will support public policies promote the use of coal as energy while improving the environment.

The group released a statement expressing its belief that coal -- America's most abundant energy resource -- is essential to providing affordable, reliable electricity for American consumers and industry.

The coalition also supports enhanced public and private sector efforts to develop and deploy new, advanced clean coal technologies.

E-mail Waste News senior reporter Bruce Geiselman at bgeiselman@crain.com