

Denver-area waste, recycling company achieves honor

Sept. 9 -- A Denver-area waste hauling and recycling company has achieved the "bronze level" in the Environmental Leadership Program operated by the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment.

Alpine Waste & Recycling, based in Commerce City, said the honor "recognizes members that voluntarily go beyond compliance with state and federal regulations and are committed to continual environmental improvement."

"Our customers have become increasingly focused on behavior and procedures that will avoid any harm to the environment and, in many cases, will actually provide a benefit," said John Griffith, president of Alpine Waste & Recycling. "At Alpine Waste & Recycling, we have the same focus -- but we also know we need to keep up with the demands of our customers."
